This dates from one of Holland's first trips to Paris in the early 1830s. The Eglise Saint-Séverin, on the street of the same name, is one of the oldest churches on the Left Bank. Originally dating from the thirteenth century, it was rebuilt after a fire in 1520. A related drawing dated 1831 was with Libson and Yarker in 2020 and another view of the church by Holland is in the Lady Lever Art Gallery, Liverpool (see Stephen Duffy, The Discovery of Paris, 2013, pp.84-5, no.35, ill.).
