This dates from Lear's first European trip. He left England in the summer of 1837 and did not return permanently to London until the late 1840s. He reached Florence in November and recalled `the clear lilac mountains all round it - the exquisite walks on every side to hills covered with villages, convents and cypresses, where you have the whole city beneath you - the bustle of the Grand Duke's court and the fine shops - the endless churches - the Zebra Cathedral of black and white marble - the crowds of towers and steeples - all these make Florence a little Paradise in its way - if it were but hotter. - Oh! How I used to go shivering about!' (quoted in Jenny Uglow, Mr Lear - A Life of Art and Nonsense, 2017, pp.110-111). He left the city with some regret but the cold urged him southwards and he was in Rome in mid December.
